LETTER FROM SACRAMENTO

By Bob Wood

Assemblyman, 34th District

A week ago Sunday, I had the pleasant and interesting experience of speaking before 50 high school students. Ten students had been hand-picked by the faculty from each of the three public schools and the two parochial high schools in the Salinas District to attend the Junior Chamber of Commerce Leadership Conference, which was held at Salinas High School. They represented a good cross section of today's high schools. I think I gained more from their views and opinions than they possibly gained from my views as a Legislator.

One of the questions I asked was their feelings of whether or not 18-year-olds, now that they can vote, should also be allowed to drink alcoholic beverages. They were unanimous in saying "yes." I then asked them if when they returned home if they would ask their mothers and dads how they felt on the same question. I have heard from a few who were considerate enough to write, and as I thought might happen, the parents were mixed in their feelings but the majority did not favor the allowing of alcoholic beverages for 18-year-olds.

To be realistic, I think most of us parents know that there are bound to be times when our children no doubt do partake of some form of alcoholic beverage before they are 21 years of age, whether they are in their own homes or elsewhere. I think it is this drinking "elsewhere" that worries most of us parents.

It is interesting to note that a constitutional amendment which offered to give those in the youth age bracket the right to drink was voted down last week by a five-man Assembly Committee. I am not a member of that particular committee, but understand from my colleagues that witness after witness appeared in opposition to the measure, which if adopted would have gone to you people for a vote because it would change the present constitutional provision prohibiting those under 21 from consuming alcohol. Although there were many witnesses in opposition, I think the one that would concern most of us was the witness who pointed out that the automobile accident rate among young people has doubled since one state enacted an 18-year-old drinking law.

As of this writing, the author is undecided whether he will ask for reconsideration of the measure. The same issue has been before the Legislature several times with the same results.

Enuf for now . . . BOB WOOD

P.S. Last night I spoke to an adult government class at Monterey High School. Some of the adults were quite young and one young man rode a new ten-speed bike to night class and placed it in the classroom to assure its safe keeping during the two and a half hour class period. They had a twenty minute break in the class and during the break, I talked to the young man and asked him if I could ride his bike because I had never ridden a modern ten-speed bike before. He agreed, and explained to me how to change gears and I took off within the confines of the campus. I was going along on a pretty good clip (or at least I thought I was) until I suddenly realized that I had to make a sharp turn to keep from running into a classroom building. But when I pushed my foot pedal down on what I thought would be the brake -- lo and behold, no brake -- and I had to choose between colliding with a picnic table or the classroom building. It seems modern bikes have hand brakes and the bike owner presumed that surely I must have known this. It suddenly dawned on me that there have probably been hand brakes on bikes for the past twenty years and I was simply a victim of the generation gap.

P.S.S. I'll know next time.

THE TOWN CRIER

World premiere performance of "Gold," long lost 3-act play by Herbert Heron and Jack London, held April 26 at Jackson High in the heart of California's Gold Country was attended by Mrs. Herbert(Valerie) Heron of Carmel, widow of playwright, director, actor and founder of Carmel's renowned Forest Theater.

This 1919 play revised in 1913 wasn't published until 1972 by Holmes Book Company of Oakland -- then in limited edition following a search in 1965 by James E. Sisson III leading to the U.S. Copyright office where a microfilm copy of "Gold" was secured.

Shortly thereafter the Second Act was produced by the Friends of the Oakland Public Library. Settings in Berkeley and the Klondike reveal a plot concerned with the search for gold in character as well as wealth.

Lately we have been asked about the progress that is being made in the training of personnel in the use of the defibrillator and other equipment which was recently donated by residents of the Valley.

This is our present status:

The defibrillator is presently being used only in its capacity as a monitor of vital signs, and as such can be used in many instances other than strictly coronary cases. It is not and will not be used as a defibrillator unit until the first aid crew is completely trained in its use.

Regarding training, first aid crewmen are presently attending an 80-hour Emergency Medical Technician Course at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, of which 15 hours must be spent on duty at their emergency room. This course also includes Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation training.

In addition, each Tuesday night, the first aid crew is receiving specialized instruction by area doctors, including cardiac specialists, in use of the defibrillator as both a monitor and defibrillator.

With this instruction, we are also receiving training in the Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitator.

It is expected that this training will continue until the doctors are assured that the crew is completely knowledgeable in the use of the equipment.

With the training we are receiving, the residents of this area may rest assured that when we start using this equipment to its fullest extent, we shall be as technically proficient in its use as it will be possible to be.

FROM THE PRINCIPAL'S DESK

By Dr. Kenneth Bullock

Principal, Carmel High School

ATHLETICS and an interest in Christianity are not always thought to be compatible in the minds of many spectators at athletic contests, nor in the thoughts of readers of the latest escapades of some given professional athlete. Yet, in fact, since 1956, a national organization has sought constantly to involve athletes with the principles of Christianity and their daily practice.

In that year, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes began on a national scale, and is now centered in Kansas City from whence it directs its national programs. On the west coast, this takes the form of local chapters in high schools and universities, and for high school students in either of the two summer conferences offered yearly in Ashland, Oregon, or at Santa Barbara.

From the 1956 beginning, with 256 conferees in attendance at Estes Park, Colorado, the program has grown to over ten thousand coaches and athletes meeting together in some eighteen summer meetings. Carmel High School organized its own chapter in 1968 under the dedicated and enthusiastic leadership of Jason Harbert, high school instructor and coach of varsity football and junior varsity basketball. Monterey and Pacific Grove High Schools have recently formed their own groups.

Support for conference attendance, which costs about $90 per student, has come from the boy and his family where feasible, but principally in Carmel from the generous support of some of the local service clubs. The Carmel and Carmel Valley Kiwanis Clubs supported a student at the first conference the school was involved with (in 1968 when Malcolm Hill attended) and they have continued their support. Since that time, the local Rotary and Lions Clubs have entered the program, as have the Kiwanis and Lions groups in the Valley. The growth in support has been such that this past summer some eighteen youths of the high school were able to attend one of the two conferences on the west coast.

One of the better-known members of the national board of directors is the ex-UCLA football great, the Reverend Donn Moomaw. When his past assistant pastor, the Reverend Deane Hendricks, assumed the pastoral leadership of the Carmel Presbyterian Church somewhat over a year ago, he brought zeal and enthusiasm to augment the program already begun by Coach Harbert.

It was principally his fund appeal that provided the opportunity for the large group to attend this past summer. Coach Harbert and members of the high school athletic teams who have attended the summer programs have been guests and speakers at many of the area service luncheons, explaining the value of the program as they have seen it. And a carryover activity seems to be seen in the activity of many of these boys in the Young Life Program now flourishing on the Peninsula under the direction of the Reverend Bob Broyles.

THE ORGANIZATION is interracial and interdenominational in character, and includes Protestants and Roman Catholics. And while Christian by title, the past summer conferences have also included some Jewish boys as well who were interested in the principles of life to be found in the organization. Interest in further information or a desire to extend some assistance certainly would be welcomed by Coach Harbert.

Christian principles are not limited, of course, only to coaches involved in the F.C.A. program. Many of our coaching staff assume active roles in their own churches, and endeavor to bring ethical considerations learned there to their athletic and teaching functions in the school. In addition to his F.C.A. role, Harbert is active in the Presbyterian Church of Carmel, having sung in the choir and served as an usher.

Water polo and swimming coach Jim Agan also attends the Presbyterian Church, and he is a member of the Board of Deacons.

Lowell Battcher, coach of frosh basketball and assistant coach of frosh football, is past president of the congregation of St. Philip's Lutheran Church in the Valley. In addition to assisting the pastor of this small church in communion activities, teaching Sunday school, and giving the Layman's Sunday message, he is also an active participant in the Gideon Society of the Peninsula.

Howard Sanborn, frosh football coach and assistant in wrestling and track, is Chairman of the Missions Board of the Church of the Wayfarer, and will take his entire family to the FCA conference this summer.

The leader of the Methodist Youth group, Fred Vogt of the Naval Post Graduate School, served this year as a voluntary coach in the wrestling program of the school.

Bob Walthour, cross country and wrestling coach, is completing his third year as a member of the school board of the Mission School, has served on the Board of the Monterey Y.M.C.A., and plans an active role in the Mission youth and athletic program.

Dick Charles, coach of varsity basketball, junior varsity football, and frosh baseball, was the basketball coach at the F.C.A. 1970 summer camp at Woodleaf, near Sacramento. He has been active as Mission President of the Monterey Bay Stake Mission of the L.D.S. Church. He also headed for four years the Mormon weekly youth and athletic program. And he spent 2½ years as a missionary for the church in northern Argentina. The youth engaged in the athletic program at Carmel High School are fortunate in having these men, as well as the others with whom they associate, following the priciples of ethical conduct in their coaching and in their daily associations with their charges.

Pending Senate bill could force county to act on flood plain zoning

Makes participation in Natl. Flood Insurance Program mandatory

LEGISLATION which could have a major impact on future construction in flood-prone areas such as Carmel Valley passed the Senate Banking Committee in Washington yesterday.

The measure, which will now go before the full Senate, is S 1495, the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973. Several companion bills have been introduced in the House of Representatives.

The purpose of the bill is to force communities with known flood hazards to participate in the National Flood Insurance Program.

Failure to do so would result in an automatic cut-off of any federal construction loans and prohibit federally-regulated banks and lending institutions from issuing mortgages in the flood-prone area as of July 1, 1975.

The bill has the strong support of the Nixon administration and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Originally introduced last fall in reaction to approximately $3 billion in property damage caused by Hurricane Agnes, it has picked up more bipartisan support this year in the wake of disastrous flooding along the Mississippi River.

California Senator Alan Cranston, a Democrat, was among the members of the banking committee who voted to send the bill to the Senate floor yesterday.

The bill declares that "the Congress finds that ... annual losses throughout the nation from floods and mudslides are increasing at an alarming rate, largely as a result of the accelerating development of, and concentration of population in, areas of flood and mudslide hazards."

It continues: "The availability of federal loans, grants, guarantees, insurance and other forms of financial assistance are often determining factors in the utilization of lands and the location and construction of public and of private industrial, commercial and residential facilities.

"Property acquired or constructed with grants or other federal assistance may be exposed to risk of loss through floods, thus frustrating the purpose for which such assistance was extended ...

"The nation cannot afford the tragic losses of life caused annually by flood occurrences, nor the increasing losses of property suffered by flood victims, most of whom are still inadequately compensated despite the provision of costly disaster relief benefits."

THE LEGISLATION would substantially raise the amount of subsidized insurance available to an individual homeowner, and to owners of multi-residential and commercial property.

New limits for low-cost coverage would be $35,000 for a single family residential home and $100,000 for other residential property and nonresidential buildings, including commercial uses, schools and churches.

Residential contents could be covered with subsidized insurance up to $10,000, and non-residential contents up to $100,000.

In each case, an equal amount of insurance at regular rates could also be acquired, doubling the total amount of coverage available to $70,000 for single family homes and $200,000 for other residential and non-residential buildings.

Similarly, total coverage for contents would rise to $20,000 for homes and $200,000 for non-residential contents.

The law sets this July 1 as the cut-off date for new federal loans or new mortgages in flood areas in which flood insurance is now available unless the building or mobile home is covered by flood insurance.

This provision does not apply to Carmel Valley, however, because Monterey County has not applied for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program.

Twice last year, the board of supervisors was given a presentation on the flood insurance program by a representative of the Department of Water Resources in Sacramento.

Both times, supervisors informally agreed to drop the subject until such time as residents of Carmel Valley and the Salinas area voice strong support for flood plain zoning.

The county has a flood plain zoning ordinance, which so far has been applied only in the Pajaro area. The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association has repeatedly urged the supervisors to apply flood plain zoning to Carmel Valley.

However, whenever the subject has been set for a hearing, strong opposition from many property owners along the Carmel River has convinced the supervisors not to take action.

IN ORDER to qualify Carmel Valley or any other unincorporated area in Monterey County for the National Flood Insurance Program, the supervisors would have to apply flood plain zoning to all areas in the county subject to flooding.

In addition to the floor of Carmel Valley, this would affect considerable property, both developed and undeveloped, along the Salinas River. Supervisor Arthur Atteridge of Salinas has said he would be very reluctant to apply such stringent controls to this area.

Supervisors have also emphasized that if flood plain zoning were applied to Carmel Valley and a home in the flood plain burned to the ground, requirements in the ordinance might make it impossible for the homeowner to rebuild on the exact same location. Major repairs or additions might also be prohibited for the same reason.

Although most attention in Carmel Valley has been to the flood plain along the Carmel River, the National Flood Insurance Program also provides insurance for mudslide damage on hillsides.

To be eligible for insurance coverage, communities must adopt planning measures for hillside construction as well as development on the flood plain.

The insurance act specifies the goals of flood plain management as encouraging "only that development which is appropriate in light of the probability of flood damage and the need to reduce flood losses, is an acceptable social and economic use of the land in relation to the hazards involved, and does not increase the danger to human life; and to discourage all other development."

It says the community should stress the importance of "diverting future development to areas not exposed to flooding," and consider the possibilities of reserving flood-prone areas for open space purposes.

It also says consideration should be given to the possible adverse effects of flood plain development on other flood-prone areas.

This issue has been raised repeatedly as property fronting the river in the lower Carmel Valley is steadily developed.

The insurance act also states that a community should consider how to encourage floodproofing to reduce the flood hazard.

In this regard, developers in lower Carmel Valley have turned to land fill, raised floor levels and diking to protect their projects from innundation by a 100-year flood.

Under a section on planning considerations for mudslide-prone areas, the insurance act calls for "coordination of land use, sewer and drainage regulations and ordinances with fire prevention, flood plain, mudslide, soil, land and water regulation in neighboring areas."

SENATE BILL No. 1495 makes it very clear what will happen to a flood-prone community which fails to participate in the National Flood Insurance Program.

Section 202 states: "No federal officer or agency shall approve any financial assistance for acquisition or construction purposes on and after July 1, 1975, for use in any area that has been identified by the Secretary (of HUD) as an area having special flood hazards, unless the community in which such area is situated is then participating in the National Flood Insurance Program.

"Each federal instrumentality responsible for the supervision, approval, regulation or insuring of banks, savings and loan associations, or similar institutions shall by regulation prohibit such instititions on and after July 1, 1975, from making, increasing, extending or renewing any loan secured by improved real estate or a mobile home located or to be located in an area that has been identified by the Secretary as an area having special flood hazards, unless the community in which such area is situated is then participating in the National Flood Insurance Program."

In order to speed up the identification of flood-prone areas, the Army Corps of Engineers and the Secretaries of the Interior, Agriculture and Commerce and the heads of other appropriate federal agencies are directed to give "the highest practicable priority in the allocation of available manpower and other available resources to the identification and mapping of flood hazard areas and flood-risk zones.

In the case of Carmel Valley, however, this was accomplished in 1967 when the Corps of Engineers issued a report and series of maps detailing the flood plain of the Carmel River.

The Corps is updating that report now in connection with a new study on possible flood control measures for Carmel Valley.

One widely-discussed possibility is a future flood control-water supply dam on the upper Carmel River. This prospect, however, is clouded by the urgent need for the California-American Water Company to supply the Monterey Peninsula with more water in the fastest possible time.

Any flood control project involving the Corps of Engineers would need approval and then appropriations from Congress, a process that could take years.

The Corps of Engineers is expected to issue an interim report of its findings within the next month.

Schall environmental impact report released for public review

Use permit appeal hearing set May 29

The environmental impact report prepared for Thomas Schaal's 72-unit condominium development adjacent to the Carmel River, west of Highway 1, was released for public review today by the County Planning Department.

The report was prepared by George Bestor and Associates, the Monterey engineering firm which has worked on the controversial Carmel River Project.

Copies will be on file and available for public review in the office of the Carmel city clerk and at Harrison Memorial Library.

The planning department is asking interested citizens or groups to submit comments in writing to the department by June 1.

The County Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on the environmental impact report on June 13, and will receive additional comments at that time.

Meanwhile, the Board of Supervisors has set Tuesday, May 29, at 1:30 p.m. for a hearing on an appeal filed by James Brady from the use permit granted by the planning commission for the development.

Brady is one of several residents of Mission Fields who have strongly opposed the project.

Residents have objected to the plan to funnel all traffic from the development through Mission Fields to Rio Road, and thence to Highway 1. At the time the property was rezoned to permit up to 108 apartments in 1967, supervisors at the time indicated this was done on the understanding that future traffic would enter Highway 1 at Oliver Road.

The nine-acre parcel was rezoned to special treatment last year, to allow clustering of condominiums, and the density was lowered to 8.45 units per acre, to allow 76 condominiums. Schall eventually cut this further to 71 condominiums and a caretaker's apartment.

Plans call for the project to be built on four feet of fill, with floor levels elevated to protect against a 100-year flood. Units would be two-story, and located in a triangular design around an interior putting green.

Schaal, a Marin County businessman, said the development is planned primarily for golfers from the San Francisco Bay Area who would like to spend weekends or vacation periods in Carmel.

Lord,
I am the cat.
It is not,
exactly,
That I have something to ask of You
Why, no --
I ask nothing of anyone --
but,
If you have by some chance,
in some Celestial Barn,
A little white mouse,
Or a saucer of milk,
I know someone who could relish them.
Wouldn't you like someday
To put a curse
On the whole race of dogs?
If so, I should say, Amen.

The charming "Prayer of the Cat" was taken from the book, "Prayers of the Ark" and included in the homily given by Father Douglas Keating at the First Communion which eight Valley children received during a recent 12:00 o'clock Mass at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church. Mrs. W.G.B. Hatch directed the service at the church which had been beautifully decorated with yellow and white floral arrangements by Mrs. Lou Allaire and Mrs. Don Weber. Selections were presented by the Choir under the direction of Mrs. William Broderick. Gifts of bread and wine were brought to the altar by Erin Burns and Brian Ambrosini. Other children participating were Jymi Lynn Friday, Jenny Powell, Troy Canham, Russell Ambrosini, Thor Rasmussen and Lindsey Friday.

SHOES FOR MANAGUA

Dr. David Morris, Carmel Valley physician and surgeon who left recently for Managua, Nicaragua, to serve for a month as a volunteer with an international medical team, has sent a plea to Valley residents for assistance after treating the 100th child in the village for hook worm ... a problem created by the lack of shoes. He is asking for Valley children's outgrown tennis shoes, cowboy boots, zoris, wooden shoes, any kind of footgear with mileage left in them to cover the feet of his young patients.

Donations may be left at the St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church with Rev. James Brock who is arranging to have them shipped or at the Carmel Valley Community Chapel where a box has been designated "Shoes for Managua" -- David and his young friends who live in a principal unit in a conglomerate of eight agrarian colonies, about 300 kilometers southeast of Managua are counting on you.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL SIGN-UPS

Vacation time approaches and of course Valley families are always reminded of the good times in store for them at the Vacation Bible School held annually the two weeks following public school. Open to ALL children regardless of church affiliation, the program begins Monday, June 18 and ends on June 29 with a program for the parents. The time will be week-day mornings from 9:30-11:45. Mrs. Don Johnson is the co-ordinator, Mrs. Kirk Gayman will be registrar and Mrs. Duane Graham will be in charge of refreshments with mothers sending cookies to assist with the daily treats.

The overall theme is "Reach Out With Jesus," taught by a fine staff of teachers who have volunteers from the different churches in the community. The daily programs include crafts, music, and Bible study. Classes include a group for pre-kindergarteners (mature 3½ year olds as well as 4's and 5's who have not yet attended Kindergarten; the Kindergarten Class (for those who complete Kindergarten this Spring) will study "God's Friends, David and Paul;" Primary (grades 1 and 2 completed) whose lesson deals with "New Testament People;" Middlers (3rd and 4th grades completed) will study the Psalms; Juniors (5th and 6th grades completed) will center their lessons around "Jesus, as a Guide for Their Lives;" and The Older Youth (Junior and Senior High young people) will have Glen Richard as their instructor. Glen is returning from last year -- is from a Young Life background -- plays the guitar to the delight of his many young admirers -- and has selected his own material to use with this group.

Teenagers are needed to assist -- to volunteer or for further information please phone 659-2431.

"WON'T YOU HELP Carmel Valley Little League?" ask "Volunteer" Anthony Galang (left) and "Hornet" Troy Canham (smiley patch) who with all of the ball players down at the Carmel Valley League Park are requesting assistance from the community in collecting "Seals of Quality" from Scott paper products with which to purchase baseballs and bats for the Valley League. According to Valley chairman, Mrs. Don Canham (left), "Each 'Seal of Quality' on a package of ScotTowels, ScotTissue, Scotties Facial Tissue, Waldorf/Family Scott Bathroom Tissue or Scott Family Napkins will be redeemable for five cents in value toward League approved bats and baseballs such as those shown by CV Little League president, Dick Klingensmith." Seals may be dropped in containers at the Village Market, the Carmel Valley Market or the Snack Booth at the ball field on Paso Hondo.

DISNEYLAND BOUND -- hopefully -- are the members of the Carmel Middle School Band who are financing their trip with a candy sale. Boxes of individual Caravelle, Mound, and Almond Joy are being sold door to door and in shopping centers by the young musicians for a donation of $1.00. Henry Avila, director of the group, announced his selection of "The Wonderful World of Disneyland" in Anaheim as not only a reward for the band's year of hard work and fine performances, but it will also give them an opportunity to see and hear the top professional musical artists of the country who are featured at Disneyland all year long. The CMS band will leave by bus on June 1 and return on June 3. You may order candy delivered to your home by phoning the school office 624-2785 or contact any band member including (Back): Steve Gere and Kelly Becket; (Middle): Debbie Lorenz, Amanda Layman, Sharon Wong (wearing Mouseketeer Hat), Susan Groves and Jill Janic. JIM DICKINSON of Carmel Valley closed out a successful career with the Monterey Peninsula Lobos Swim Team at the California Junior College Association Swimming and Dving championships held at Foothill College, Los Altos Hills, May 3, 4, and 5. There Jim added to his aquatic laurels by breaking the school's record in 500 freestyle with the time of 5:08.5. As a workshorse of the MPC team this season and last, Jim was consistent in winning in dual meet competition in the 200, 500, and 1,000 freestyle and in the 400 medley relay (in which he was a backstroker) and 400 freestyle relay swimmer. He collected six gold medals at the Coast Junior College Conference Championships this year at Cabrillo, assisting his team with the championship for the second season. Jim, who formerly swam for Carmel High School, and was a member of the Carmel Barracuda Diving Team, is the son of Rear Adm. C.E. Dickinson (Ret.) of Robles Del Rio.

SOMETHING NEW has been added to the Carmel Barracuda Swim and Diving Teams thanks to the generosity of the Kiwanis Club of Carmel Valley who presented them with ribbons (1st through 6th place, sporting the Barracuda emblem) to be awarded during the home meets of their summer aquatic program. Presenting samples of the awards is (left) Otto Huebner, president of the Valley Kiwanis to Laurie George, representing the diving team and Ken Conklin, representing the swimmers. The first swim meet of the 1973 season will be a home meet with Hollister on June 30 and the divers will begin competition on July 6 at the Seaside High School pool.

World of Pets

By Norma Kays

TURTLES

UNDERSTANDING the needs of animals is of prime importance when handling and caring for them. Knowing their instincts, habits, background, etc., enables us to understand the reasons for their behavior in almost every situation.

It is the moral responsibility of every pet owner to educate himself on his particular pet (s). Getting this kind of education is very simple and inexpensive. Pet stores have little booklets on practically every kind of animal kept as pets. These booklets cost around 35c and they give good, basic information. The library is also an excellent source of information.

No matter what kind of pet you have, you owe it to that pet to give it the best possible care. It is an unhappy but true fact that pets' lives are held very cheaply in many families. Parents allow their children to bring pets into the house with no supervision or guidance as to the kind of care they receive. A sad example is the tiny turtles sold in dime stores and pet shops. Millions of these little creatures die every year from neglect and-or lack of knowledge as to their needs.

A friend brought one of the little semi-aquatic turtles to me about two years ago because, as she said, "he needs love -- he's just not doing well at all." Her little girl had had him about a year and he was the same size as when the bought him. He was kept in a small plastic, kidney-shaped container, complete with plastic tree. He was fed the boxed "turtle food" sold in pet shops as part of the "package." I knew nothing about turtles, but after seeing this pathetic little reptile, I was determined to try and give him a better life than he had previously known. The turtle book I purchased from a pet shop enlightened me considerably.

Here are some things I learned about turtles:

THEY NEED an aquarium arranged so that they have dry land and water. The water should be deep enough for them to swim and eat beneath its surface. Flat stones and pieces of wood should be placed on the bottom of the aquarium so the turtle can hide or bask at will. The water should be changed at least once every three or four days. Temperature is extremely important. These little turtles come from southern areas and require a temperature ranging from 75 to 80 degrees. Sharp drops in temperatures are very harmful to them. Lights are built into aquarium lids for this purpose. A 40-watt bulb is usually adequate. When putting fresh water into the aquarium, make sure it is of room temperature to avoid chilling.

Sunlight is a must for good health. Artificial light will do if no sun is available. Be sure your turtle has a shaded area to escape to, though, in the event the sun's rays get too hot. Hot sun can be fatal to reptiles.

Raw, chopped, lean beef or fish is a recommended diet, with occasional bits of lettuce or other tender vegetable leaves. A pinch of bone-meal and a drop or so of cod liver oil should be mixed with the food as often as possible. The dried "ant eggs" sold in pet stores are not recommended, nor is a straight diet of house flies. Tri-weekly feeding is usually sufficient, taking care to see that the food is consumed. Indifference to food in winter is not necessarily a sign of illness, as they have a tendency to hibernate.

AFTER READING the turtle book, I immeduately purchased a used aquarium complete with lid and light for $5.00 from a pet store, and started my little friend on his new life. The change in him was remarkable. In less than four months he grew to twice his original size, was happy and healthy, and active. He loved the sunshine and would bask on his favorite rock with eyes closed and all four feet stretched out in mid-air. He took his chopped meat and fish from my finger, snatching it quickly and ducking underwater to eat it. (I do not recommend this method of feeding for small children, however, because often, in the turtle's eagerness for the food, he may accidentally grab a finger!)

He had a definite personality -- when I arrived at home in the evening, he would swim immediately to the nearest side of the aquarium and paddle frantically in one spot, wanting me to feed him. When I started toward him with the food on my finger, he would climb quickly onto his "feeding rock". I became very fond of him, but felt rather sorry for him because I felt he must be very lonely in that small area all day long.

Mrs. May, of the SPCA, told me of a young man in the area who is an expert on turtles and after talking to him, I decided that my little turtle friend would have a much better life with him. I check on him from time to time and am happy to report that he has a mate now and is getting along very well. "Why all the fuss over a turtle?" you may say, but I think it was worth it.

BEEF PLUS BRAND ... NEW AT SAFEWAY!

BEEF PATTY MIX...A BLEND OF BEEF AND TEXTURED VEGETABLE PROTEIN...

BEEF PLUS is a wonderful new Patty Mix now being offered in Safeway Meat Departments. It's a blend of about ¾ Safeway ground beef and about ¼ hydrated textured vegetable protein which is delicious, nutritious and lower in cost than ground beef. It is high in protein, closely matching ground beef in this important characteristic. Many people who have tried BEEF PLUS say that it tastes better than ground beef. The vegetable protein in BEEF PLUS absorbs and holds much of the meat flavor and many of the juices which are usually cooked out of ground beef.

Serving Suggestion

BEEF PLUS can be used just like ground beef . . . In 'burgers, meat loaf, spaghetti sauce . . . in every ground beef dish, plain or fancy. We invite you to try BEEF PLUS with our money-back guarantee of satisfaction.

BEEF PLUS can save you money in two ways . . . It costs less per pound than ground beef. It holds meat juices better in cooking and so makes plumper patties, hamburgers, and Salisbury steaks.

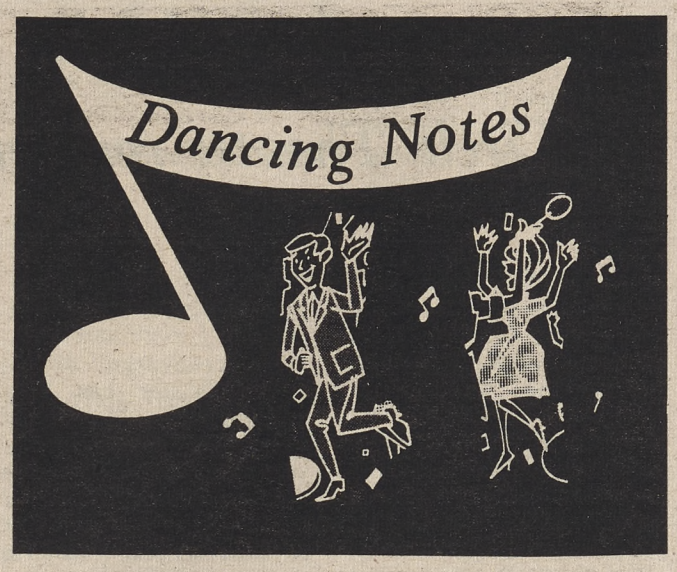
POLYNESIA ... PLUS: Exotic South Seas drinks and foods ... plus fresh seafood and great steaks ... the Mark Thomas' Outrigger on Cannery Row offers this and more. Let Jerry and Sioux entertain you ... they present their popular fun-show on Cannery Row on Tuesday through Saturday nights 9:15 to 1:00. Sioux Scott is a comedienne who can really belt out the songs. Jerry Winters is also a top quality entertainer who is an excellent musician. Jerry will often walk around the tables in the Outrigger lounge kidding with the crowds. Later, up on the stage, he uses names and places from his conversations and refers to people in the audience during the set. Jerry and Sioux are a warm and witty duo you really should see.

PAUL LUCIDO SAYS "if you haven't eaten on the patio of the Summerhouse Restaurant, you're making a big mistake ... the sun is beautiful, the food is great, and the price is right!" Lunch is served daily (except Tuesdays) from 11:30 to 2. Dinner also served nightly from 6 p.m. on. One of the dinners featured at Summerhouse is a New York Cut Steak. This dinner includes soup, salad, homemade bread and baked potato -- all for $5.95.



THERE IS ALWAYS A FRIENDLY CROWD gathered in the lounge of the Pirate's Cove at the Del Monte Hyatt House. Two Easy Pieces, a rock and romantic duo, play on Monday through Saturday from 9 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. for dancing (and listening!). Lee Durley plays the organ while Jim LaPine accompanies on drums. They do everything from Roberta Flack to Italian & Spanish songs. All in keeping with the early Spanish motif of the Pirate's Cove.

"LOVE ERA" IS THE NAME of the group which has been performing for the last six weeks in the Iron Horse Saloon, Ramada Inn, Monterey. Be sure to catch the "sophisticated rock, but yet funky" sounds of this group -- Monday through Saturday from 9 to 1:30. Love Era is possibly the best dance band on the Peninsula right now! Each member of this talented group is not only accomplished on their instrument but also a fine singer ... Jude on keyboards, Dino on drums, Chris on lead guitar, and Joe on bass guitar.

THE OUT OF SIGHT SOUNDS of Sal Mercurio and Group are in the upstairs cocktail lounge of the Royal Inn, Monterey. There is an hors d'oeuvre table nightly, and dancing Tuesday through Saturday 'till 1:30 a.m. Sal Mercurio is on cordovox, Brad Bivens on guitar and William LaPine on drums ... added feature is vivacious young singer Joy Bonner. The Royal Inn is now serving a summer luncheon buffet during the week from 11 to 2 ... "A Royal Treat," it includes hot entrees, an array of decorated salads, and a deluxe dessert table!

A NEW SHOW-DANCE QUINTET is performing at the Holiday Inn, Carmel -- John Scott Corporation. This group features Carol Kimzey, formerly with the New Christy Minstrels and John Scott, formerly with the Modernaires. The Warner Brothers crew filming Zandy's Bride down the coast in Big Sur is staying at the Holiday Inn, Carmel, so they quite often catch the entertainment ... on Wednesdays through Saturdays from 9:00 to 1:30.

Two concerts on tap for high school band, chorus

Carmel High School musicians are facing a busy weekend with a major spring concert scheduled for Monterey Peninsula College at 8 p.m. Friday (May 18) and a band concert in Carmel's Devendorf Park from noon to 1:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Both the high school chorus and band will participate in Friday night's program in the music building at MPC. There is no admission charge.

Special soloist at the spring concert will be Gordon A. Finlay, a member of the Sacramento Symphony Orchestra, who was coronet soloist with the U.S. Navy Band for 20 years. He is currently brass instructor at the University of California at Davis and teaches in the Davis public schools.

Saturday's band concert is billed as "The Sounds of Summer," and will include popular selections ranging from numbers from "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Sound of Music" to "Sounds of the Carpenters," "May Day Carol" and the "Washington Post March."

Both the chorus and band are under the direction of Henry Avila, chairman of the high school music department.

Carmelo kindergarten invites young visitors

Children who will be entering kindergarten at Carmelo School in September may find out what to expect by visiting the class next week.

New students may attend kindergarten for two hours between 10 a.m. and noon on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday morning.

Parents should notify the school office, 624-2749, if they plan to have their child visit.

Meanwhile, at the opposite end of the elementary spectrum, "graduating" Carmelo students will visit Middle School Monday morning for a special orientation program. Tularcitos fifth graders will make a similar trip on Wednesday.

Parents of Carmelo students who will enter the sixth grade next year may schedule an individual appointment with Jay Criddle, Middle School counselor, for Thursday evening, May 24.

Criddle will be at Carmelo School from 7 to 9 p.m. that night to meet with parents and discuss individual needs and concerns. A specific appointment time should be arranged in advance with Mrs. Van Bibber in the Carmelo office.

Also on the Carmelo agenda is the school's annual barbecue, set for Sunday, June 3, at the water company's plant on the Carmel River east of the Village.

Antique show has treasures

"The Show of a Thousand Treasures" describes the Monterey Antique and Collectors' Show and Sale which will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Featured will be a "Hall of Antiques," a "Hall of Coins and Stamps," a "Gem and Mineral Patio," and an outdoor "Garden Court of Arts and Crafts and Collectibles."

The show appeals to browsers and buyers alike, with its array of items ranging from bags of silver dollars and hand-painted china to roll top desks, precious silver match safes and Graf Zeppelin stamps.

Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. The show is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Antique, Coin and Stamp Show Club and benefits a sholarship fund for college students.

Circle Theater reopens with 'Adaptation'

The Circle Players will reopen the Circle Theater with a one week presentation of Elaine May's off-Broadway comedy hit "Adaptation," accompanied by modern dance and improvisational theatre.

"Adaptation" will run Thursday through Sunday, May 24-27. Performances will begin at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. On Sunday, May 27, the show will be a matinee, beginning at 2 p.m., followed by an outdoor barbequed chicken dinner.

General admission will be $2. The Sunday matinee with dinner will cost only $4.50. Call 624-2271 for reservations.

The renovation of the Circle Theater has been in progress since last summer, when a group of young theater artisans undertook the challenge of bringing the theater's physical condition back up to code.

The acting troupe presented a benefit performance last July, but further shows were delayed until the theater could be rewired.

Now the Circle Theater is open and anticipates a full season of plays, dance, lectures, film, and multi-media this summer and in the seasons ahead. Particular emphasis will be placed on experimental work in theater forms, new American playwrights, and spontaneous improvisational acting (in which even the audience at times participates.

Following the performance in May, the Circle Theater will host a double bill of Israel Howowitz plays, "Rats" and "The Indian Wants the Bronx," with dance and improvisations, as usual, to be presented in June.

Carmel High's 'Pygmalion'

Have you been to Coventry Gardens lately, or seen Eliza Doolittle?

You can see them all in George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," as Professor Higgins attemps to turn a Hyde Park flower girl into a princess of royal blood, through mere speech lessons.

Presented on stage by the Pawnshop Players of Carmel High School, in their Theatre I, June 1-2 and 8-9. Curtain is at 8 p.m. with British tea and cakes served at intermission.

Bay School benefit

"High Plains Drifter" will be shown at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday (May 23) at the Village Theatre to benefit the Bay School.

The event will be preceded by a 7:30 p.m. wine and cheese hour. Both events are to raise funds for the continued operation of the school, which has been threatened with closure by trustees of the Carmel Unified School District.

'Alice in Wonderland' coming to White Oaks

"Alice in Wonderland" is coming to Carmel Valley's White Oaks Theatre, presented by Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

This production of Lewis Carroll's classic marks the first extended run for the Magic Carpet. In the past, the Magic Carpet has performed only one day a month for the general public and spent most of its time touring schools from Big Sur to Stanford. "Alice in Wonderland" will be performed three weekends in June -- Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m. -- starting June 1.

The exterior doors on the White Oaks Theatre will be open for "Alice," and the audience will look down the valley toward the ocean. The Magic Carpet will bring to life the characters of wonderland with the Carmel Valley sunset as a backdrop.

The set is made up of giant spools that are used for storing cable. In wonderland, thanks to Pacific Telephone, M.P.T.V., and P.G.&E., cable spools of assorted sizes will become mushrooms for the Magic Carpet to play on, around, under and through.

"Alice in Wonderland" will open Friday, June 1 at the White Oaks Theatre, Carmel Valley Road at Ford Road.

TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

Recently a statement submitted by Keith Evans, President of the Monterey County Foundation for Conservation was printed in the Outlook (April 26). I have made the suggested evaluation of a number of items of interest in the statement.

First, since Mr. Evans submitted the statement, I assume that he agrees with it. It is stated that they "believe that professional and political machinery for excellent community and county planning exists on the Monterey Peninsula and in Carmel Valley."

While one can certainly agree that the machinery exists, what has brought about the change of heart since the time Mr. Evans resigned from the County Planning Commission? Shortly thereafter he stated (Outlook, October 21, 1971): "I don't think the Monterey County Area Master Plan is worth the paper it's written on anymore," "I think what we have going on now is 'instant planning' and planning with a sledge hammer," and "Frankly, I don't think they (large property owners) should stand still for any more planning ..."

Secondly, it seems to me to be very difficult to argue that taxation laws are not written with a bias to development when the assessed valuation of property must be based on its value when put to its highest and best use, which of course is interpreted to mean as developed property if it is near developed property. A case in point is the Odello property, of course. While there were other contributing factors, property taxes were one thing which made it impossible to continue farming operations on a profitable basis.

As for zoning affecting the value of property, the Odello property is again a prime example. Who can name a developer interested in developing that property at one unit per acre? The zoning change was worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Odello brothers.

Regarding low density zoning as a device for excluding the next comer, I think this may in part be true. But the motive often stated by developers and implied by the Monterey Foundation for Conservation is an oft repeated untruth, and is getting somewhat old.

I am not interested in keeping other people out because I have mine and don't want anyone else in. I am interested in preserving Carmel Valley as a pleasant place to live, or visit. If the valley is to be preserved as a pleasant place to live and visit, not everyone can live here. Who knows anyone living elsewhere that would take a leisurely drive through the valley to gaze upon meadows and hillsides covered with thousands of houses, instead of millions of wildflowers?

Besides that, who can now look at the Los Angeles Basin or the Santa Clara Valley and say "We are all extremely pleased that we had the foresight to provide plenty of reasonably priced housing so everyone who wanted to live here could. We look forward to more progress of this type in the future."

In fact, almost no one is happy with the way things turned out in those areas. Only developers now enjoy the fruits of the last two decades, and they are turning to relatively virgin territory for their next conquest, e.g. Carmel Valley.

How the breakdown of costs for a new home refute Mr. Sackman's impression about high density zoning being subsidy for the builder or developer is not clear to me. Actually, I believe the point made by Mr. Sackman was that changing the zoning to higher density increases the value of the land, hence subsidizing the land owner.

Along this same line, a perusal of the real estate ads for the past year or so will reveal that building sites in the valley go for around $15,000, regardless of whether it is ¼ acre in the Village, or 2½ acres in the country. Fact of the matter is, reasonable cost housing is impossible in Carmel Valley for a variety of reasons, most of which are affected only slightly by high density.

As far as the Critical Review Process is concerned, one needs only to look at the developments near the mouth of the valley to see that the current procedure is not critical enough. Yes, there is duplication in the Critical Review Process, but unfortunately it appears to be necessary.

In closing, I would like to strike a note of some agreement. Yes, good planning is the game we should all play. But (sorry about that) when poor planning is about to prevail, it must be challenged.

Respectfully,
RICHARD FRANKE

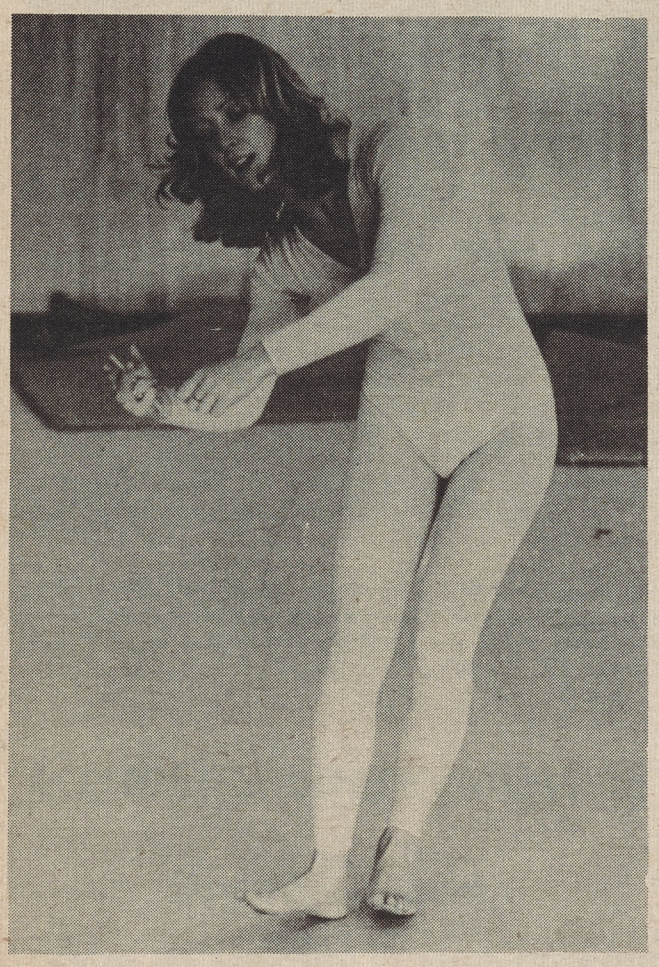
Carmel High to present dance program



INSTRUCTOR Mary Kay Bridges gives a demonstration of dance technique to students in preparation for the dance recital.

"Energy on Root," a modern dance concert presented by Carmel High School, will be staged at 8 p.m., Thursday, May 24, at Sunset Auditorium.

Thirty young women will be dancing in this second concert of the year. They choreographed most the dances themselves, which are "light for spring," explained teacher Mary Kay Bridges.

One of the dances is an "ecology Dance" with all the girls dressed in animal costumes. The "Elastic Dance" will be under a black light, with elastic bands attached to their bodies to give an interesting effect.

One of the students, Allison Faul, will sing a song she wrote. Cesca Lucido will perform a mime skit.

Tickets are $1.25 for adults, 75c for students and children. They may be purchased at the door or through participating dancers.

VICKIE McBRIDE strikes a pose as she rehearses for next week's modern dance program.

THIS VACANT CORNER at the intersection of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Blvd. isn't likely to remain covered with weeds and brush much longer. The Meharry Development Company has filed an application to construct a 162-unit motel here. Last week County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon ruled that the project will require an environmental impact report. If the use permit is eventually approved, the motel will be comparable to the Holiday Inn, out of sight to the left on Rio Road, which has 165 rooms. The Meharry project is proposed for 11 acres out of a total of 25 acres along Rio Road which are zoned for motel-hotel use. Photo by George T.C. Smith

Tips on how to conserve energy

As part of a continuing program on environmental education, St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church is circulating a new information sheet entitled "Energy Conservation."

For the benefit of all Valley residents, we are reprinting a portion of this report and also eight tips on conserving energy from the current issue of The Ventana, published by Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club.

ENERGY CONSERVATION

"We have a critical need for energy, yet all our present sources of energy produce adverse environmental effects. While we search for new sources of energy and seek to develop new clean energy technologies, it is vitally important that we act now as individual citizens and as a society -- to conserve the use of energy in every way we can."

Russell E. Train
Chairman - Council on Environmental Quality

WHAT IS ENERGY?

Energy is the capacity to do work. Just as our bodies must be fed fuel in the form of food which is burned to create energy, so must machines be fed fuel or power in order to perform work.

Many people think of electricity as a fuel. It is not. Fuel materials such as coal, oil, gas and uranium are converted to electricity in power plants.

Are you aware that:

1. The U.S. with 6 percent of the world's population uses 35 percent of the world's energy, and our demand is doubling every 15-20 years. Demand for electricity is doubling every 10 years.

2. The U.S. may run out of low and moderate cost natural gas, oil and uranium in less than 30 years.

3. All forms of energy will cost more in the future because of scarcities, and because in the past environmental and social costs were largely ignored.

WAYS TO CONSERVE ENERGY

1. Transportation

Moving people and freight accounts for about 25 percent of the energy consumed in the United States. Half of this amount is used by automobiles.

Larger cars with more powerful engines consume more fuel than small ones. For example, a car weighing 5,000 lbs. uses over twice as much fuel as one weighing 2,000 lbs. Other features such as air conditioning and automatic transmission contribute to fuel consumption.

Buy a car no larger or more powerful than you need, without unnecessary features.

Walk and ride bikes. Half of all automobile trips now cover less than five miles.

Ride public transportation where available.

Organize car pools.

Encourage the building of better public transportation systems in your community.

Have your car periodically maintained and keep it tuned up.

Good driving habits can cut your fuel consumption in half.

Speeding is a costly consumer of fuel. The average car driven between 75 and 80 miles per hour will consume almost twice as much fuel per mile as the same car driven at 50 miles per hour.

On the road, accelerate smoothly and ease into stops.

Do not race the engine.

Instead of idling the engine to warm it up in winter, drive slowly for the first quarter mile.

Do not leave your engine running longer than 3 minutes while waiting.

2. Heating and cooling

To Conserve Energy in Heating:

Have furnace checked once a year and change filters frequently.

Close damper in fireplace when not in use.

Lower thermostat for sleeping. We suggest 60 degrees. By lowering the daytime setting of your thermostat by 1 degree you use 3 to 4 percent less fuel. By lowering it 5 degrees you use 15 to 20 percent less fuel.

Insulate your body -- wear a sweater.

Discourage over-heating of public buildings, particularly schools and libraries. Pressure managers of public buildings to conserve energy.

To Conserve Energy in Cooling:

All buildings should have windows that open.

Encourage the design of buildings with less glass.

Shade windows from direct sunlight. Preferably shade them from the outside with trees, window vines, shutters that close, awnings or roof overhangs.

Close light-colored draperies to the sunlight.This can reduce heat gain by 50 percent.

3. Household appliances

Currently 20 percent of our total energy and 30 percent of our electric energy output is consumed in the home. Efficiency of our appliances is the key to saving in this area.

4. General tips

Artificial materials generally take more of our non-renewable energy resource to manufacture than do natural ones.

Be natural and save energy.

Many items in our society are purposely designed to wear out prematurely. Re-manufacturing these items uses up energy. Having to junk them adds to our solid waste problem.

Demand that products be made to last.

ENERGY SAVING TIPS FROM VENTANA CHAPTER, SIERRA CLUB

1. Use cars as little as possible and use the car that requires least gas per mile.

2. Use only the wash and rinse cycles if you have a dishwasher. Open the door to let the dishes dry. Also, only wash full loads.

3. Buy beverages in returnable containers (see February issue of The Ventana).

4. Don't buy disposable products or products wrapped in plastic. Buy fruits and vegetables loose, carry your own shopping bag, leave overwrappings at stores, and avoid overpackaged products.

5. Save water. A good way is to put one or two bricks in the water closet of your toilet. Don't let water run unnecessarily.

6. Avoid using a garbage disposal if you have one -- it places an additional load on the sewage system and thus requires more energy.

7. Don't buy unnecessary electric appliances. Down with trash mashers, electric knives, electric can openers, electric combs, and such. And turn off lights when not in use.

8. Use non-phosphate detergents.

Valley stations limit hours, not gas

Several Carmel Valley gas stations are turning to shorter hours, rather than limits on gallons purchased, to work within quotas established by the major oil companies.

Richard Moore, owner of the Carmel Valley Arco station at the Mid-Valley Shopping Center, briefly tried limiting customers to 12 gallons only last week

But when no other station followed suit, Moore dropped that plan and instead will close two hours earlier than usual during the week at 7 p.m.

Across the street, Tom Steiny at the Mid-Valley Chevron is doing the same thing. He plans to operate from 7 to 7 during the week, and from 8 a.m. to noon on Sundays.

Steiny expects to have enough gas to serve anyone, then hedges: "The only thing that can go wrong is if any other stations run out."

In the Village, the Mobil and Texaco stations plan to operate as usual, including evenings and Sundays.

But Bill Hall's Chevron station will close one hour earlier, at 7 p.m., during the week, and may close early on Sundays, depending upon how much bas has been sold.

"Rationing is no solution, that's for sure," commented Bill Hall Jr. "People will just buy 10 gallons here, and go across the street and buy another 10 gallons. You won't accomplish anything that way."

SCOUT-O-RAMA ON SATURDAY

Carmel Valley's multi-award-winning Troop 127 will join more than 40 Peninsula Cub packs, Scout troops and Explorer posts at the 1973 Scout-O-Rama from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday at the Monterey County Fairgrounds.

Exhibits and demonstrations of Scouting skills will be in the home economics building, and awards will be given for outstanding displays by Scout units.

Red Cross asks donations

The Red Cross needs donations to help support its effort in aiding disaster victims in the Midwest.

"I have visited the flood area in the Midwest and I regret to report there will be an increasing number of disaster victims needing Red Cross assistance. The Red Cross is now providng emergency assistance in 22 states and Puerto Rico to people affected by floods, tornadoes and explosions. A minimum of 28,000 families have been affected," said Frank Sutton, chairman of the American National Red Cross.

"Over 100 Red Cross shelters have cared for 10,000 persons and over 32,000 persons have been fed. The Mississippi area situation is precarious and will continue to be so for several weeks. Government resources are being used to the extent available, but the Red Cross disaster relief funds are totally depleted."

Stanton stressed that the support of the public in a neighbor-helping- neighbor gesture is of vital necessity in order to meet the anticipated financial relief requests.

The American Red Cross Monterey District Chapter, 1760 Fremont, Seaside or the Carmel Chapter, Box AR, Carmel, will accept all contributions earmarked for disaster relief.

Carmelo exhibit evokes the mood - beauty of Peru

A colorful exhibit on display in the lobby of the Carmel school district office is the outgrowth of a unique social studies project on Peru undertaken by the Beta team at Carmelo School last fall.

The Beta team, composed mostly of students eight and nine years old, delved into a cultural study of Peru which included geography and climate, its early Indian groups and native arts and crafts.

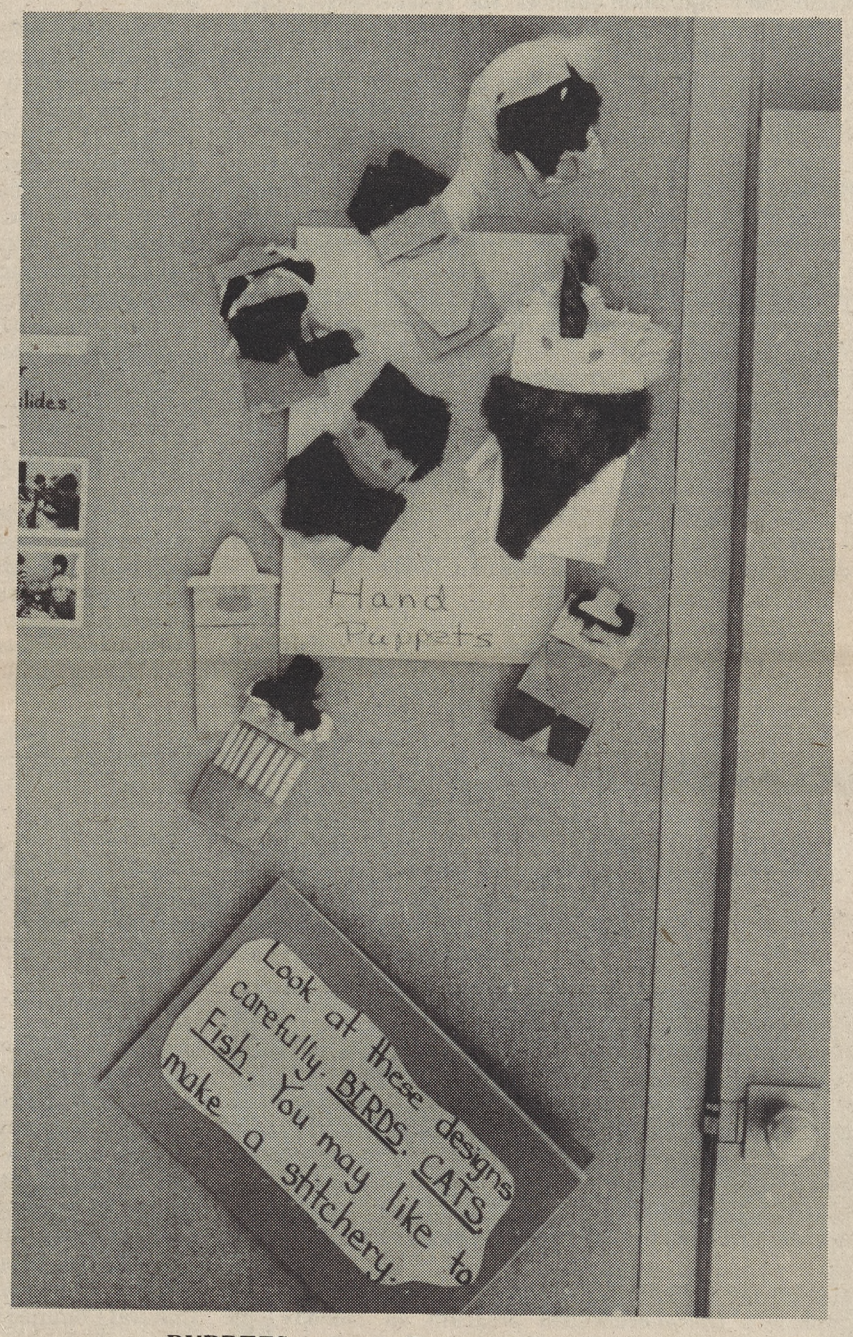
The Carmelo students were the first in Monterey County to focus a social studies unit on Peru. The country was selected because its varied terrain, ranging from tropical jungles to towering snow-capped mountains, gave students an opportunity to learn how environment affects life styles.

Undoubtedly the biggest thing to come out of the study was a towering llama of papier mache over a wood and chicken wire frame, which was as big, if not bigger, than his real life counterpart. After months of tender loving care in a Beta classroom, the llama is currently visiting M.P.C.

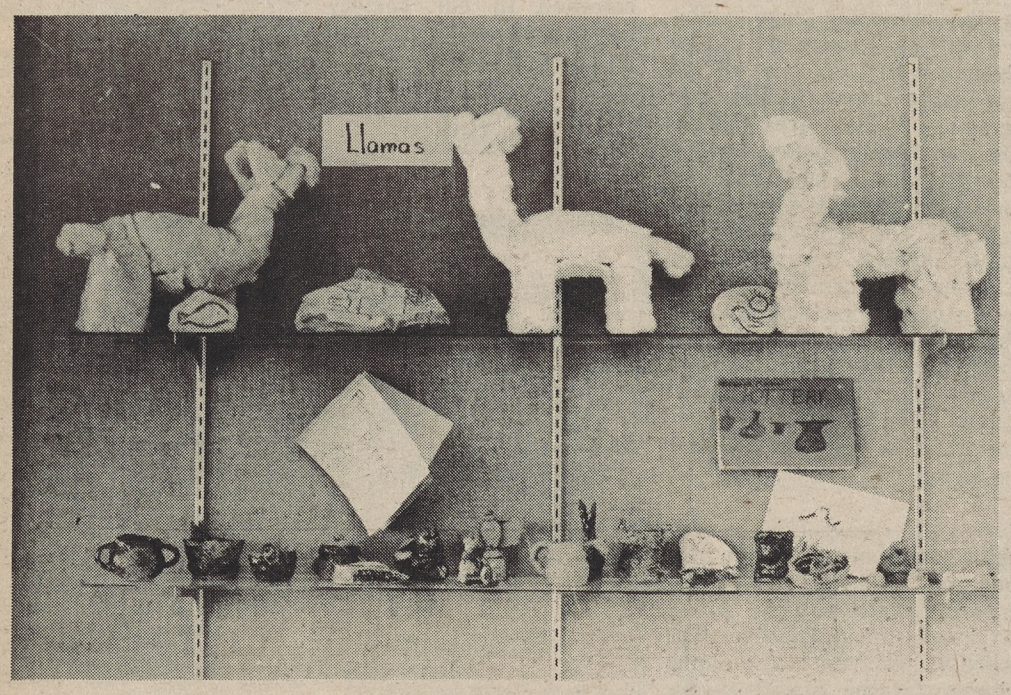
Smaller llamas, however, are on display in the central office, along with pottery carefully patterned after old Indian designs, well-researched reports, coloful watercolors and eloquent haiku.

It's worth a special trip to the office, located in front of Carmel Middle School.

Teachers for the project were Imogene Speiser, Shirley Graham and Pat Allan. Mrs. Speiser is presently on sabbatical leave in Mexico, and her co-teachers are eagerly awaiting her return to Carmelo and the prospect of an "absolutely smashing" unit on our neighbor to the south next year.



PUPPETS are another crafts project which tell something of the cultural heritage of Peru.



FUZZY LLAMAS parade above a row of pottery mugs and figures which Carmelo students modeled on old Indian designs from Peru. Human figures, cats and birds, particularly the condor, are important motifs. The tiny pots at the far right were made by Jay Kunkle from clay he dug in Carmel Valley.

HAIKU evokes the mood of distant Peru.

Trial ordered on Odello lawsuit

Seen as major test case of environmental reports

By PAT GRIFFITH

ATTORNEY William Kreutzmann said today that the forthcoming trial testing the validity of an environmental impact report prepared for the Odello redevelopment project may turn into a test case comparable in importance to the celebrated Friends of Monmouth decision.

Kreutzmann, attorney for the Odellos, will defend the county board of supervisors and County Clerk Ernest A. Maggini in the lawsuit filed by the City of Carmel.

The city's suit charges that the environmental impact report prepared for the developer, Omega Properties of Kansas City, Mo., failed to meet the guidelines of the California Environmental Quality Act. The individual supervisors were named as defendants because they are acting as the county's redevelopment agency for the project and accepted the EIR.

On Tuesday, Superior Court Judge Stanley Lawson issued a preliminary injunction to block the redevelopment plan until the Carmel lawsuit is heard.

No trial date has been set yet.

Kreutzmann said today that the trial will be the first test of the Knox bill enacted the the State Legislature last December which postponed the effective date of the Environmental Quality Act to April 4.

The purpose of the moritorium was to allow state and local planning officidals to establish guidelines to be followed in the preparation of environmental impact reports required by the Environmental Quality Act.

Kreutzmann said the statute provided that EIR's filed during the moritorium needed only to comply with local planning procedures.

Therefore, he said, the defense will contend that the report prepared for the Odello development met regulations then in effect in Monterey County, and therefore complies with the law.

But because the precise meaning of this provision has not been tested in court Kreutzmann continued the Carmel suit will be watched carefully throughout the state and could end up before the state Supreme Court.

CARMEL CITY attorney George Brehmer, Jr. said this morning he is still preparing his case and does not yet know if there will be questsions of fact which could call for a jury trial.

Normally, in an injunction proceeding, the questions raised are ones of law and are decided by the judge alone.

Kreutzmann, however, made it clear that he believes that any delay in going to trial will put the entire redevelopment project in jeopardy.

"We're moving to get it set for trial as soon as possible," he said, "because if this drags out into the next fiscal year, it is possible that State funding for the 155 acres of open space on the west may be lost."

Under the redevelopment plan, the eastern 137 acres of the ranch are to be developed with a 300-room hotel and 298 residential units.

The land to the west of Highway 1 will be purchased for permanent open space. The State has agreed to put up half the total $1.7 million cost, and most of the balance is to come from tax increment bonds based on the development on the east.

If the State withdraws its support and the redevelopment plan fails, Kreutzmann said, the property west of Highway 1 would revert to a U or unclassified designation.

At that point, he predicted, the Odellos would probably consider putting in a golf course "which they've had several offers on" or housing. Remember, there were 60-foot lots along the highway there.

"We feel the Odellos have backed down and backed down and been the good guys all through this," Kreutzmann said. "The present density is just one-third of what was originally proposed for the property.

"Now it's down to the bare minimum where it's not economically feasible for a developer to come in with any less.

"There are some radical conservationists out there, the Green Panthers, who would like the land to stay open forever. But the Odellos are the ones who have to pay the taxes.

"I don't think people have the true story of the trade-offs involved in this situation. I don't think they understand that they could lose that open space."

Kreutzmann said that Omega Properties is not doing any further preliminary work on the development plan until the lawsuit is resolved.

Fine cast has romp in Girl in the Freudian Slip

IT'S A COMEDY to be sure, but it's also a wonderfully funny satire.

That needs to be said about "The Girl in the Freudian Slip" which opened last weekend at Carmel's Studio Theatre.

In addition, it's wonderfully well performed. Jon Baldwin, the Studio's new director, assembled a splendid cast, a pleasing blend of experienced local talent with several beautiful newcomers.

Jim Jordan, who appears altogether too infrequently on the Carmel stage, is simply superb as Dr. Dewey Maugham, the psychiatrist around whom the action swirls.

As his wife, there is Donna J.R. Conne, always comfortable and confident in whatever role she assumes. As their daughter Leslie, Michele Nichols comes across the footlights as a real comer.

Then there is "the girl", in the person of Marion Durham, a new and refreshing face indeed. She is more than believable as provocative Barbara Leonard, a former patient of Dr. Maugham, who returns just in time to see herself in a starring role in his typed-out fantasies, this time as a literary agent.

The mixture also includes Lewis Leader as Mr. Wellman, now two years deep in analysis under Dr. Maugham. He has the funniest scenes in the play and brings them off with aplomb. The playwright, William F. Brown, has tremendous fun with this role, demonstrating as it does the monumental nonsense of what is called "unstructured analysis." In the end, poor Wellman of course has a monumental triumph. The kind that only a devilishly clever playwright could dream up.

THE ROLE of Dr. Alec Rice will be played for the rest of the run by Al Hood, the well-known Carmel Valley flyer. But for the opening weekend it was self-entrusted by Mr. Baldwin himself. Dr. Rice is the kind of "family friend" quite common in our society today, a bachelor type who fits in comfortably where needed, or even where he is not. Mr. Baldwin had no trouble at all sliding into the role.

Anyhow, there is a great deal of merriment involved in the situations set up by Mr. Brown. Particularly when a jealous wife finds her husband, the psychiatrist, in a compromising situation, and all hands (except the daughter) make what appear to be very human, but destructive, responses to these emotional crises.

But the doctor finally marshalls all his resources and emerges triumphantly successful in resolving the dilemma. The evidence doesn't justify it, but then I guess that's what the play is really all about.

It must be said that Mr. Baldwin brings together a most entertaining evening. A collection of beautiful people, saying clever things, acting frustrated, seductive, overwrought or whatever the script calls for, in a quite professional manner.

The lights and sets were designed by the producer, Robert H. Evans Jr., and they were, as usual, fine. Roy St. Clair served as assistant to the director, Renee Wurzmann as a technical assistant and Roberta Little was her usual efficient self as stage manager.

"The Girl" plays for six more weekends at the Studio and you'll find it refreshingly diverting after those many dreary nights viewing the vast wastelands of televisionland. GMD

Sunset views:

Take a film trip to Russia

By FRANK H. RILEY, Director
Community and Cultural Activities

THIS ALWAYS SEEMS to be a sort of let-down season of the year. All the great series -- symphony, Chamber Music Society, Carmel Music Society, Hidden Valley, and Explorama -- complete their seasons in May; and then we have a few weeks of coasting until the Bach Festival takes over for July.

I must say that all the winder-uppers were great -- the symphony's choral-orchestral program on Monday, the youthful musicians of the Chamber Music Society on Saturday; Lilit Gampel brought here by the Carmel Music Society May 5. All were eminently notable. Only Explorama remains to terminate the various offerings.

The final adventure-travel film of the Explorama series will be presented tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. in the Sunset Center Theatre. It is billed as "Czechoslovakia and the Ukraine." Produced and filmed by Clay Francisco, a familiar figure on the travelogue circuit and a frequent lecturer in the Sunset Center program, it is an account of a 5,000 mile journey through Eastern Europe's legendary kingdoms of Bohemia, Moravia, and Slovakia in Czechoslovakia and the Ukraine in Russia.

Visit Prague, "city of a Hundred Spires;" glimpse into the life of composer Antonin Dvorak; see the old walled city of Tabor; witness a folk dance festival at Straznice; Kiev, capital of the Ukraine; Odessa; see Bratislava on the Danube; and view a performance of the Ukrainian Folk Opera. This is a rare look at a part of the world where few westerners have ventured. Julia Marlowe - Tickets in Room 8A here at the center can supply you with tickets.

An unusual and interesting event scheduled recently on our calendar is a performance by the Modern Dance Group of Carmel High School. They will give their program at 8 p.m. next Thursday, May 24. Tickets for this event will be sold at the door, and all funds received will be used to further the dance program at Carmel High School. Thus, by attending you will gain for yourself an evening of enjoyment while at the same time you will be making possible the continuance of a very worthwhile program for area youth.

WE HAVE BEEN the recipient of a generous gift from a resident who has been a loyal supporter of the Sunset Center programs. The purpose is to modernize Room 4 and make it suitable for meetings of up to 50 people. We hope to equip it with a small serving pantry to accommodate the serving of "tea," and to provide for small exhibits, conferences, slide and film showings, intimate recitals, and for social occasions such as bridge afternoons, wedding receptions, and similar events. Everything is now in the drawing board stage, but we hope to have a completed project by the fall.

Anyone who would like to provide for similar updating to Room 3, companion Room to 4, should address the Carmel Cultural Commission, c/o of the manager's office at Sunset Center. Such interest in the Sunset Center project by citizens is not only encouraged but is also deeply appreciated.

By the time you read this, the interesting photo exhibit sponsored by the local United Nations Association will be gone from The Marjorie Evans Gallery and we will be arranging and hanging our new exhibit from the Smithsonian in Washington. Called "Beginnings of Bay Area Shingle Architecture," it consists of 88 photographic plates showing many examples of this unique Bay Area architecture. Of special local interest is the fact that many of the homes and buildings that are depicted are from the exclusive work or collaboration of Bernard Ralph Maybeck, designer of our own Harrison Memorial Library. An explanatory text refreshes us on the history of the period. You should find it most interesting. The exhibit will open in The Marjorie Evans Gallery at Sunset Center on May 21 and remain through June 15. It is open free of charge daily except Saturday and Sunday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and is also open one hour before each performance in the Sunset Center Theatre.

Similarly, the spectacular array of "Ojos de Dios" now on view in the Sunset Center Theatre will come down May 20 to be replaced by an exhibit of paintings, batik, and pottery -- all the works of eight instructors who work with the Adult Education Department of the Carmel Unified School District, whose workshops and studios are located in the little building located on the southeast corner of the Sunset Center property. We urge you to plan to see this show -- not only to see the work but also to let yourself be persuaded to join one of the many adult education classes and become personally involved in a creative activity.

State bike fund may spur local improvements

BICYCLISTS ALONG Carmel Valley Road may find the going easier in the future thanks to a special "Bicycle Lane Account" recently established under the Department of Public Works.

The new fund is the result of a bill passed by the State Senate last year, which requires the Department of Public Works to set aside at least $360,000 a year "for the construction of bicycle facilities to be used in conjunction with the state highway system."

The money comes from the 1.04 cents per gallon gasoline tax which is returned to cities and counties.

The bill allocates $800 a month to each county and $400 a month to cities for approved bicycle lane projects. Money not spent will be reallocated to eligible cities and counties.

According to the bill, the intent of the Legislature is to provide "a continuing source of state funding to aid cities and counties in obtaining funds from federal sources for the construction of, and the acquisition of rights-of-way for bicycle lanes where the separation of bicycle traffic from motor vehicle traffic would increase the capacity or safety of a highway."

FIRST PRIORITY will go to bicycle lane projects which have 50 percent or less federal funding.

For eligible projects which are not federally funded, the state is prepared to pay two-thirds of the estimated cost of construction of the bicycle lane, including the acquisition of necessary rights of way.

What this will mean for the Monterey Peninsula is not entirely clear.

Both Carmel Valley Road and Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas have been designated as bicycle routes as part of the county's recreational trails plan.

Although for many years individuals have urged the county to establish a bicycle and-or equestrian path along the Carmel River, no funding has ever been provided for such an undertaking. All the land fronting on the river remains in private ownership, although in a few cases the owners have designated trails for short distances for riding or hiking.

However, the county road department is broadening and paving the shoulders along Carmel Valley Road for the dual purpose of increasing safety for motorists and providing a safer route for bicyclists.

According to L.M. Orrett, traffic and programming engineer for the road department, the county is applying for funding from the new account to help pay for shoulder improvements.

"BUT IT'S IMPORTANT to remember that money this year will be allocated among eligible projects throughout the state according to a priority list which favors separated bicycle ways financed with a maximum of federal participation," Orrett said.

"Federal funding is not often used in Carmel Valley because of the conditions that go with it, and because the public rights of way available for bicycles are only the roadways themselves.

"Thus it isn't possible to secure the highest priority."

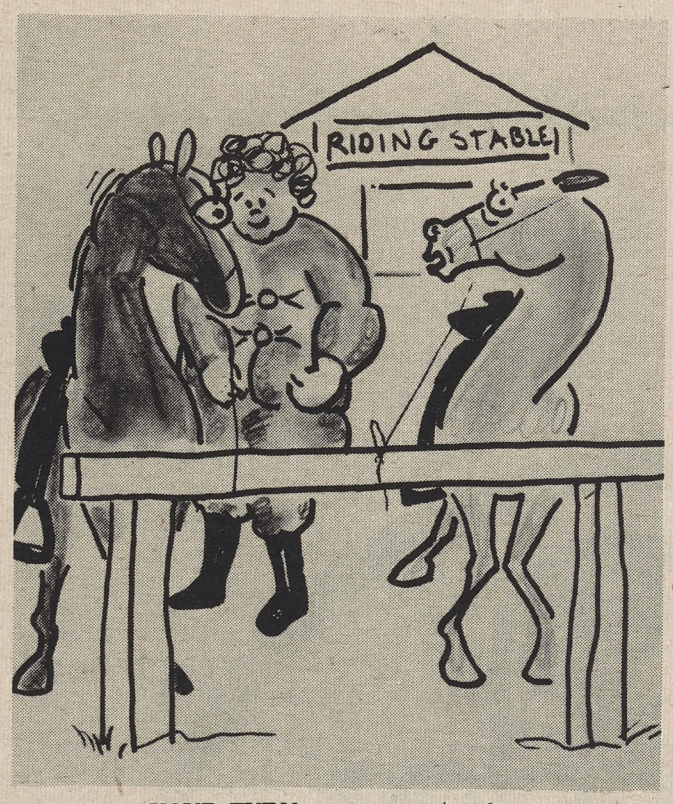
Orrett also pointed out that even if the county does receive money from the bicycle lane account for Carmel Valley Road, the amount will be only a small portion of the actual expense of the project.

In theory, at least, Monterey County could receive $9600 a year for a bicycle lane project, with the possibility of qualifying for additional funds in subsequent years.

Orrett contrasted this with the approximately $200,000 which was spent to construct a bike trail through Fort Ord.

"We know that what we're doing along Carmel Valley Road is an advantage safety-wise," he said. "But until we get thousands of bicycles along that road, there probably isn't a chance of being able to do anything besides improving the road shoulders."

Even at that, it would appear that the new bicycle lane fund may serve to get local governmental agencies out of low gear in providing better facilities for bicycles. And the way prices and shortages are rising in the gasoline industry, there may be "thousands of bicycles" along Carmel Valley Road far sooner than anyone expected.



YOUR TURN ... no, your turn!

FEEDBAG

By Lucy Smithson

DOES YOUR HORSE cringe when you start to saddle him? He may be trying to tell you something. Maybe he has a sore back or is about to get one from the way you've been saddling him.

Last week we talked about how saddles were constructed. Your horse needs a saddle that fits him. There are different sizes and shapes of saddles same as there are different sizes and shapes of horses.

But even when your horse's saddle fits perfectly, the way you're using it can make him sore.

When we were young we envied the cowboy who with one hand could swing a saddle through the air so it dropped onto the horse's back with stirrups and straps in place. But now we know that dropping a saddle on a horse's back can really bug him. The right way to saddle a horse is slow and easy. With cinch and right stirrup laid up over the saddle it should be eased onto the back. Go around and check the off side when you lower the cinch and stirrup.

If your horse lays his ears back and acts like he wants to bite when you cinch up, maybe you're pulling the cinch up too tight or too fast. Or maybe he has a sore back.

A SORE BACKED HORSE shortens up his strides when moving. He turns and stops in a wide spraddling manner instead of quickly or smoothly. He's trying not to jar himself with any sudden moves. When you try to move him out he takes more short strides faster instead of loosening up and extending his gait.

Rough riding or a leg problem can also make a horse move like this. But you have to consider a sore back when you're checking out possibilities. If uncorrected, this can become a lasting problem. Because the horse is afraid to hurt himself he learns to travel short all the time. His muscles adapt themselves. He keeps the rough choppy gait even after the sore back is gone (or the rough rider). Training a rough gaited horse to hang loose is a whole 'nother problem.

If your horse is complaining of nagging backache, pull off the saddle for a closer look. Look for places where the hair is roughed up or even rubbed off. Check where the cinch rings might rub and look for girth sores down behind his arm pits where the skin is loose and tender. Feel with your hand clear under his belly.

Maybe his back muscles are sore or tight. Been doing much run-and-stop-quick riding lately? Keyhole races? Jumping? A little calf roping? Been riding double? With your finger tips probe and push on the areas to either side of the withers and just back of them. Work back to the kidney area which is the weakest part of the horse's back. Does that get a reaction from the horse?

The weakest part of a horse's back is just where the second rider must sit when you ride double. Anyone who allows his horse to be ridden double more than just a little bit deserves to be sent back-packing in the Sierra with his ruck sack balanced over his kidneys instead of his shoulders.

ARE YOU USING a good saddle blanket? Is it clean? Wool blankets are the best. They're heavy enough to lay smooth and they "breathe" when the horse is sweaty. Sheepskin is fine for the same reason -- even the new fake sheepskins.

The old sponge rubber pads were hot enough to cook under but the new plastic foam saddle pads are good. Hair pads would have been fine except their undersides scratch some tender skinned horses. And their topsides usually have a canvas lining that traps the heat and sweat and "scalds" the horse's back.

When you're saddling the horse you brush clean the area where the saddle and girth go. Lay the saddle pad a little forward when you first put it on. Slide it back into position. This helps all the hair lay straight.

After you saddle the horse, cinch the saddle fairly snug. Then walk him a few steps before tightening the girth for riding. This avoids wrinkled skin in the arm pits and keeps a horse from getting "cinchy."

Now watch Fat Frannie mount her horse. One hand on the saddlehorn, the other hand on the cantle. One, two, three, hup ... kerthump. Now she puts her right foot in the stirrup and gives the saddle a wrench to the right to get it up in the middle again. The saddle had sagged to the left while she climbed up. Did any of that help the horse's back?

YOU stand at the horse's shoulder and look at his tail. One hand on the mane, the other on the horn or pommel if you're riding English. Turn the stirrup to face you. Swing up and around and ease down on the horse's back. Tha-at's better. You won't have to send him to the chiropractor this week.

Kids know why the S.P.C.A. matters

A postscript to last week's trip to the S.P.C.A. by two classes at Tularcitos School came in the mail yesterday in the form of reports written on the field trip.

Here are some samples, guaranteed to brighten the day for any animal lover:

"We need an S.P.C.A. because when an animal is abused, they will try to heal and get the animal back in shape. They care for animals such as dogs, horses and most of the animal life in the Monterey area. I think there should be more animal care centers..." -- David Hagerty.

"When the S.P.C.A. gets a call about an injured animal, they get in the ambulance and go get the animal. Then they feed it, and tame it, and most of all they love it and be kind to it." -- Rodney Anderson.

"We need the S.P.C.A. for caring for animals that have been mistreated by people who probably didn't care for them, or didn't have the money or didn't have the proper home for the animals ..." -- Doug Glasco.

"... The S.P.C.A. is trying to teach the people to be kind to animals, to treat them right and not to be mean. That's what the S.P.C.A. is trying to teach the people." -- Angelo Shake.

"Some animals (at the S.P.C.A.) get sold, but most don't. There is an over-population in animals. Some have to be put to sleep. When the animal is nice looking and has good habits, it gets sold ... If you get an animal, get it at the S.P.C.A.!" -- Julia Kerfoot.

EMERGENCY CALLS

The Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department answered four calls for medical assistance this week.

Last Thursday at 4:33 p.m., Mrs. Randolph Hilton of Country Club Drive was taken to Community Hospital as a medical emergency.

Mrs. Winifred Howe of 133 Laurel Drive was taken to Community Hospital at 11:11 a.m. Sunday. A short while later, Margaret Gale of Cachagua was treated for an asthma attack at the fire station and released.

The department's first aid crew was out again this morning when Beatrice Larson of Lower Circle was taken to a local doctor's office at 11:02 a.m. and then transported to Community Hospital.

The department also had one fire call, at 4:30 a.m., caused when an outdoor trash pile at the home of Beth Hitchcock on Merrill Way reignited after it had been theoretically extinguished during the day. There was no damage.

Planner Victor Riches among speakers

Foundation for Conservation sets first public meeting May 24

The Monterey County Foundation for Conservation will hold its first annual general meeting next Thursday, May 24, at 2 p.m. at Rancho Canada Golf Club.

Three guest speakers will address the meeting, which is open to the public.

Brad MacDonald, legislative consultant for the Santa Cruz Board of Realtors, will outline the movement underway in three counties to unite realtors' and citizens' groups in an organization to be known as "The Central Coast Regional Coalition of Concerned Citizens."

Bob Senz, executive secretary of the Santa Cruz Taxpayers' Association, will describe the activities of their organizations in regard to planning and development.

The final speaker will be L. Victor Riches, prominent planning consultant from Los Altos, who will discuss "The Power of Truth in Land Use Education."

Riches has been involved in extensive consultant work on the Monterey Peninsula and prepared the master plan for development of the 20,000 acre San Carlos Ranch in 1965. At present he is preparing two position papers for the Foundation for Conservation on the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan and slope densities.

Riches worked with attorneys Myron Etienne, Jr. and Brian Finegan, and engineer Carl Hooper, to assist the Foundation for Conservation with the recommendations it submitted last September for changes in the controversial area plan.

This same group is now preparing a second summary of the plan for the Foundation, which will emphasize five points:

The need to define the flexible and amendable character of general plans; the economic need for incentive clustering, to make moderate-priced housing available to a large, unserved population in Monterey County; the "costly inefficiency" of the proposed critical review process which duplicates the function of the required environmental impact reports; the "ambiguous and confiscatory nature" of the classification for "open space" in the plan as applied to large, privately-owned areas; and the preservation of prime agricultural land.

Keith Evans, former member of the Monterey County Planning Commission is president of the Foundation for Conservation.

Reservations for the meeting on May 24 may be made with Bruno Odello, 624-4776; Russel Hansen, 372-7511; Sherley Ashton, 624-9239; or William Barker, 422-9063.

THE ORGANIC GARDENER
In Carmel Valley

PLANT PROPAGATION

SPRING and early summer are a good time to start new plants. The commonest way to do this is by means of seeds, but there are other (asexual) ways as well.

Most plants are made up of two essential divisions, the sexual, which is the flower, fruit, nut, etc. and the vegetative, or asexual, which consists of the leaves, stew, trunk, and roots. This column will tell how to start new plants by asexual means.

Growing plants this way has several advantages. First, since there are never two parents, the new plant will be identical to the parent. Thus if a favorite apple tree is getting shaded out, or too old to bear well, it can be started as a new tree by air layering.

Also, it is often faster to start a new plant asexually. An example would be geraniums that can be brought to vigorous bloom in one year by ground layering.

Strawberries can be reproduced rapidly by separating and replanting daughter plants. For the experiments, several varieties of apple can be grown from the same tree by bud grafting.

There are many other methods of propagating plants asexually, but some are hard to describe in words so that they can be successfully done.

For instance, some of the methods of grafting can be shown and easily understood, but are hard to describe in words alone. We will discuss only those methods that can be described easily in words and that can be done by the home gardener with an absolute minimum of specialized equipment.

AIR LAYERING

This can be done with nearly any of the flowering trees such as apple, citrus, peach, apricot and plum including the ornamental flowering varieties. It can be done with avocados, almonds, and walnuts as well, but remember any tree that is on a grafted root stock will reproduce a plant with the root system of the top of the tree. For instance, some orange trees are on a bitter lemon root stock. A new orange tree produced by air layering will not have a bitter lemon root system. In some cases it will matter and sometimes not.

The equipment required will be some sphagnum moss (a double handful for each branch to be layered), some clear polyethylene plastic (fairly heavy, 4 mils or better), a knife, scotch tape, and if desired some Rootone or other root stimulant. This last is not required but might help get a higher percentage of "takes."

Select a vigorously growing branch for the new plant. About one foot to 18 inches from the tip select an area between buds, if possible, and with the knife cut all the way around the branch, down to hard wood. Move about ½ inch from the first girdle cut and repeat. This means the ½ inch section of bark can now be freed from the underlying wood and removed completely. This will leave this little section of branch bare of green covering all the way around it, but the wood portion of the branch keeps the tip attached to the tree. Dust wound with Rootone.

The sphagnum moss should be well soaked in water; in fact it is better to put the moss into a bucket of water before you make the cut. Lightly squeeze the moss until most of the water is gone and spread the moss evenly around the bare branch section.

Wrap the clear plastic loosely around the sphagnum moss, overlapping the cut ends by a few inches. Fasten the two ends of the plastic past the moss next to the branch with string or twist-ems. Seal the edge of the plastic up and over the moss with scotch tape to make a water tight seal.

In two or three months begin observing through the plastic bag without removing it. As soon as roots can be seen coming through the moss, the bag can be removed, the branch cut the rest of the way below the root zone, and the switch can be planted.

Be careful not to let the roots dry out after removal of the bag. The moss can be used to keep the roots moist and, in fact, can be planted in place. The little switch should be watered every day for a few days and at least once a week for the first dry season. The top won't take off right away because the roots will be growing first.

SOIL LAYERING AND STEM PLANTING

This is simpler yet and will be successful with many plants.

With geraniums, the simplest of all, break off a branch, stick the broken end in the ground and water. Don't fertilize until the plant is established. Many times geraniums won't even wilt, sometimes they will drop their leaves if it is exceptionally hot when they are first put out. Keep the soil moist but not wet. After geraniums are established they don't require much water.

If a large number of geraniums are to be planted, pieces of green stem (don't use woody base sections) about 3 or 4 inches long can be cut from sections about ¼" or larger. Always plant the lower section (end that was nearest the root) in the ground one to two inches deep. Remove the leaves from the part to go underground.

As in the air layering, Rootone can be used on buried end to increase the percentage of takes. Geraniums should be established within about 2 months.

More on propagation later.

Only in Carmel Valley item. We picked up a young hitchhiker in the Village who said he was going to Carmel. When he got in the car he saw the Cassette player and homemade cassettes.

"Hey," he said, "is that Beethoven's Ninth (Symphony) you have?"

"Yes," I said, "but Schubert's Ninth (Symphony) is already on the player."

"Please put on Beethoven. I love Beethoven," he said.

Beethoven was put on and the second movement was developing nicely when we arrived at Carmel.

"If you want to hear the rest of the symphony, you'll have to ride out to Ft. Ord and back with me," I said.

And he did!
